

Summary

of the Book

Crime & Punishment

Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky (1849-1864) The Russian writer was sentenced to death in 1849 for his part in a plot to set up a printing press. He spent eight months in prison before his sentence was commuted to hard labour. In 1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch, on his first wife at the age of 25. □ □ Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky (1849-1864) The Russian writer was sentenced to death in 1849 for his part in a plot to set up a printing press. He spent eight months in prison before his sentence was commuted to hard labour. In 1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch, on his first wife at the age of 25. □ □ Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky (1849-1864) The Russian writer was sentenced to death in 1849 for his part in a plot to set up a printing press. He spent eight months in prison before his sentence was commuted to hard labour. In 1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch, on his first wife at the age of 25.

Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky (1849-1864) The Russian writer was sentenced to death in 1849 for his part in a plot to set up a printing press. He spent eight months in prison before his sentence was commuted to hard labour. In 1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch, on his first wife at the age of

25. Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky (1849-1864) The Russian writer was sentenced to death in 1849 for his part in a plot to set up a printing press. He spent eight months in prison before his sentence was commuted to hard labour. In 1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch, on his first wife at the age of 25. Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky (1849-1864) The Russian writer was sentenced to death in 1849 for his part in a plot to set up a printing press. He spent eight months in prison before his sentence was commuted to hard labour. In 1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch, on his first wife at the age of 25.

[illegible]

1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch, on his first wife at the age of 25. Crime and Punishment by Fyodor Dostoevsky (1849-1864) The Russian writer was sentenced to death in 1849 for his part in a plot to set up a printing press. He spent eight months in prison before his sentence was commuted to hard labour. In 1859 he started a journal 'Vremya' ('The Epoch') which was prohibited by the Censorship. He was forced to write his first work, The Epoch,